

Ringo von Eckartsberg

July 1, 2021

Ringo was my light, love and doggy soulmate. He was also my best companion, protector, comforter-in-chief and indisputably the love of my life for nearly a decade — nowhere near long enough. During our time together, our time together, I suffered some traumatic losses but Ringo's presence in my life kept despair away. Every day, he reminded of that is good and happy in this world. Now — suddenly — he is gone. Too soon. I am still trying to process the reality that we will never be together again in this this lifetime. However, I am forever grateful for every minute we had together, and I would never give up a second of our time together just to avoid the pain of his untimely death. Every night no matter how difficult the day, I made it a priority to tell Ringo that he was the best, smartest, kindest, prettiest, bravest boy ever and how lucky and blessed I was to have him. I will never forget my precious boy. I am forever grateful for the joy, happiness and unconditional love he brought to my world. Ringo will never be truly gone because he will forever live in my heart and soul. Not one day will ever go by that I do not remember him with love and gratitude. Au revoir my sweet boy -- until we meet again....

Comments

“ We lost are cat like a month ago we used to call him Fathead Fred I love and miss him very much and Sarah is my fiance we had three kittens that my cat had two girls and one boy we was keeping them all but then he passed away so now we only have two girls kittens

chriskiya - July 20 at 07:28 AM