

Onyx Yanok

“Until one has loved an animal, a part of one's soul remains unawakened”
(Anatole France)

Onyx was immensely the greatest dog anyone could ever have and he was a gift to the Yanok family. Dogs are healing to many, and to us, Onyx was. He calmed our anxiety in the midst of the hardest seasons. There are still no words for the loss of this sweet boy. He felt exactly what we felt and knew the way to our own hearts. He had a personality of his own. He loved to be pet and his ears rubbed. He loved to be right at the center when all the family was home. He protected our family like no other. You had to get through him in order to come into the home. That's how much he loved us. Car rides and playing outside were his absolute favorite activities. To have the windows rolled down in the car, so he could stick his head and tongue out the window for all the world to see. That right there was his pureness, and his innocent joy. We were extremely lucky to have the time we did with him. He was the strongest and bravest boy. He sure did leave a paw print on our own hearts. Onyx, thanks for showing the world that comebacks and bravery still exist. It is funny how people do not always bring out the best in people, but dogs always do. Onyx has officially crossed over the rainbow bridge and entered into Heaven with no more pain. He brought healing to those who met him, and it was time for him to have his own healing. Rest In Peace to our Onnie Bear, we love you and miss you so much.
